*Since there are two 1918 directories, the index will have SL after the year just for the St. Lucie County Directory.

TOTAL ESTIMATED POPULATION FROM 1911-1912 DIRECTORY = 990

TOTAL ESTIMATED POPULATION FROM 1918 DIRECTORY = 2946

Vero became Vero Beach after 1925. To facilitate indexing, beach was not added to this list.

The 1927-1928 City Directory contains street addresses which were not included in this list. Many individuals did not give occupations. If there is an asterisk * after the name, according to the information in the 1927-1928 directory it is to "denote colored person or firm, but we assume no responsibility for its wrong use, errors often creep in."

A Word about the Occupation Field:

Most occupations were obvious, but some were left with their abbreviations to leave to the reader's interpretation. Many had nothing listed and are noted as "None Given."

- 1886-87 has a number which denotes the number of acres cultivated.
- 1931-32 telephone directory, I included the street address if one was listed.

POST OFFICE / TOWN DESCRIPTIONS:

Descriptions of each town from the directories for the given years are listed below. They are worth repeating here for the interest of the reader. Grammar, misspellings are not corrected from the original. Many of the towns were not included in the directories because of several reasons. 1)They did not exist at the time of the directory. 2)They were no longer a town. 3)Information was not available at the time of the directory. 4) Many of the towns were just listed as a post office with no information about the inhabitants.

VERO BEACH

1927-28 Vero Beach, the county seat of Indian River County is the jewel city in the sub-tropical setting of the lower East Coast of Florida. Located on the main Dixie Highway and Florida East Coast Railway, 228 miles south of Jacksonville and 145 miles north Miami, this beautiful city catches the eye of every tourist and leaves a favorable impression.

Cutting a silvery path across the eastern section of the city is the Indian River which gives the county its name and forms the label of quality for the fruit and vegetable raised in the vicinity. At the front door of the city is the broad beach and Atlantic Ocean, always the supreme attraction for tourists, together with such other recreational features as are afforded by two golf courses, tennis courts, gun-club, and boating and fishing facilities.

The back door of the city opens upon the rich agricultural lands of the Indian River Drainage district, a reclamation project that has made available 50,000 acres of Florida's best soil. Here are grown the luscious citrus fruits which find favored markets throughout the north and all kinds of vegetables, particularly snap beans, tomatoes, potatoes, eggplant, peppers and cabbage. Small fruits, such as strawberries, and blackberries are cultivated to a considerable extent, while attention is also given to raising of flowers and bulbs and the husbandry of bees. Prosperous dairies may be found, where all year forage reduces operating costs and where nearby markets supply a profitable outlet for the products.

Vero Beach grows too rapidly to give statistical facts in a publication of this kind, and its beauty speaks for itself to any visitor. It should be sufficient to say that this city offers every desired feature for permanent residence, winter sojourn or casual visitation and presents opportunities for supremely profitable and safe investments in many lines. Detailed information is always available at the Chamber of Commerce.
